New Credit Repair Software Offers Consumers Customized Solutions for Improving Financial Well-Being

Simple program allows users to effectively dispute inaccuracies and remove unverifiable information from credit reports

Dallas, TX (November 18, 2009) – Luster, a Dallas-based provider of credit repair solutions, today announced the launch of its downloadable credit repair software that provides consumers the necessary tools for disputing inaccuracies and unverifiable information on credit reports, to improve credit scores legally, privately and effectively.

Available for download at www.lustermymcredit.com, Luster is a comprehensive and educational product offering consumers the resources to contact credit bureaus and creditors on their own, without the need or expense of credit repair agencies or lawyers.

"With limited credit availability, the accuracy of a consumer's credit report has never been more important than it is today," said Luster co-founder Colin McGrady. "Luster offers users the necessary tools to ensure the accuracy of their credit report, providing credit file management and an application that allows users to successfully improve their credit score independently versus hiring a costly attorney."

Once the software is downloaded on the user's computer, Luster provides solutions for each step and possible scenario of the credit dispute process, allowing for customized communications in disputing inaccuracies and unverifiable information on credit reports. Luster's affordability, easy-to-use interface and privacy allow for a simple and secure software package.

Luster retails for $49.99 and is available for download on Microsoft and Macintosh operating systems. The one-time fee includes two user log-ins, a credit repair manual, access to more than 30 professionally drafted dispute letters, and tracking and recording of all letters and correspondence for the three major credit bureaus. A free 30-day trial is available with limited access to all of Luster's features.

"Luster gives consumers complete control for disputing inaccurate credit reporting at a reasonable price point. With so many credit repair options available, Luster strives to be transparent, giving our users a credible solution they can trust," continued McGrady.

Identifying a need for a solution to disputing credit report inaccuracies, McGrady developed his first credit repair software in undergraduate school and continued to study the credit reporting industry. After meeting Stephen Harris, an attorney with experience in over 10,000 consumer related matters, McGrady decided to expand and update the software, creating Luster.
